
3/67 B Interstate law firm

It is proper for attorneys licensed to practice law in different adjacent states to form a partnership for the practice of law, so long as the letterhead and other listings make it totally clear in which states the individual lawyers are admitted. Obviously a lawyer from the firm not admitted in a particular jurisdiction will have to associate with local counsel if he makes appearances in court or consults with clients in such jurisdiction. (3/29/67)